

I implore you to not consider anything that would lessen the impact of the Indiana Telephone Privacy law. Prior to placing my telephone number on the no-call list, it was not at all unusual to receive 3-4 calls PER DAY (yes, Sundays, too), and typically when were having our best family time of the day, around the evening meal. No one has the right to enter my home uninvited, either physically, or on the telephone. Until the no-call list, I felt that right had been taken from me, simply because I had telephone service. Blanket calls by telemarketers is not what I want intruding on the sanctity of my home
- please do not lessen the effectiveness of the Indiana law by enacting something that circumvents the privacy now returned to me by this law.

Regards,
Stephen K. Nethery